

Epiphany

Perhaps it is the steamed and pressed roast of a winter blend filling my ears with sounds of a constant need for desire

Or the string of letters dancing inside my bedside read

Slowly planting themselves on the crevices of my mind

An illusion engulfing in the richness of the already pre-existing

Perhaps it is the art of creation which makes the dreadful idea of

A longer life worth contemplating